TEST 13

Growing Pains

By Jeans Little

Mother got mad at me tonight and bowled me out
She said I was lazy and self-centered
She said my room was a pigsty
She said she was sick and tired of forever nagging, but I gave her no choice
She went on and on until I began to cry
I hate crying in front of people. It was horrible.

I got away, though, and went to bed and it was over
I knew thing would be okay in the morning
Solid with being sorry, too polite, but okay
I was glad to be by myself.

When she came to my room and apologize
She explained, too.
Things had gone all wrong all day at the store
She hadn't had a letter from my sister and she was worried
Dad has also done something to her.
She even told me about that
Then she cried.
I kept saying" It's all right. Don't worry"
And wishing she'd stop

I'm just a kid.
I can forgive her getting mad at me. That's easy
But her worries.....
I don't know what to do with her sadness.
I yell at her often. "You don't understand me!"
But I don't want to have to understand her
That's expecting too much.

TEST 15

Read the text and answer the questions.

The cop moved along the street, looking strong and important. This was the way he always moved. He was not thinking of how he looked. There were a few people on the street to see him. It was only ten at night, but it was cold. And there was a wind and a little rain in it.

He stopped at doors as he walked along, trying each door to be sure that it was closed for the night. Now and then he turned and looked up and down the street. He was a fine-looking cop, watchful, guarding the peace.

People in this part of the city went home early. Now and then you might see the lights of a shop or of a small restaurant. But most of the doors belonged to business places that had been closed hours ago. Then the cop suddenly slowed his walk. Near the door of a darkened shop a man was standing. As the cop walked towards him, the man spoke quickly.

"It's alright officer" he said. "I am waiting for a friend. Twenty years ago we agreed to meet here tonight. It sounds strange to you, doesn't it? I'll explain if you want to be sure that everything's all right. About twenty years ago there was a restaurant where this shop stands. "Big Jeo' Brady's restaurant." "It was here until five years ago" said the cop.

"Twenty years ago tonight" said the man, "I had dinner here with Jimmy Wells. He was my best friend and the best fellow in the world. He and I grew here in New York like two brothers. I was eighteen and he was twenty. The next morning I was to start for West to find a job and make a great success. You couldn't have pulled the Jimmy out of New York.

"We agreed that night that we would meet here in twenty years. We thought that in twenty years we would know what kind of men we were and what future waited for us" "It sounds interesting. Have you heard from your friend since you went West?"

"Yes for a time we did write to each other" said the man. But after a year or two, we stopped. But I know that Jimmy will meet here if he can. He was as sure as any man in the world. He'll never forget." The waiting man took out a fine watch, covered with small jewels. "Three minutes before ten" he said. "It was ten that night when we said goodbye at the restaurant door"

The cop took a step or two. "I'll go on my way" he said, "I hope your friend comes all right. If he isn't here at ten, are you going to leave?"

"I am not!" said the other. "I'll wait half an hour, at least. If Jimmy is alive on earth, he'll be here by that time. Good night, officer"

"Good night," said the cop and walked away. There was now a cold rain falling and the wind was stronger. About twenty minutes he waited and then a tall man in a long coat came hurrying across the street. He went directly to the waiting room.

"Is that you, Bob?" he asked, doubtfully

"Is that you, Jimmy Wells? Cried the man at the door. The new man took the other man's hands in his, "It's Bob! It was certain I would find you here if you were still alive. Has the West been good to you?"

"It gave me everything I asked for. You've changed, Jimmy. I never thought you were so tall" The man from the West was beginning to tell the story of his life.

At the corner stood a shop with electric lights. When they came near each turned to look at the other's face. The man from the West stopped suddenly and pulled his arm away." You are not Jimmy Wells" he said. "Twenty years is a long, but not long enough to change the shape of a man's nose"

"It sometimes changes a good man into a bad one" said the tall man. "You've been under arrest for ten minutes, Bob. Chicago cops thought you might be coming to New York. They told us to watch for you. Are you coming with me quietly? That's wise. But here is something that I was ask to give you. It's from a cop named Wells"

The man from the West opened the little piece of paper. His hand began to shake a little as he read.
