“The time is six p.m. This is the World News Service. The death toll on the Glendining pit disaster has now reached forty in count, with the discovery of two more bodies early this morning. For the past five days rescue workers have been working round the clock. They are now trying to reach the hard coal, which, as they think, some of the men would have reached through old workings. A spokesman for the Mine Workers’ Union said, that there was little hope of finding any of the men alive. Messages of sympathy have been received from her Majesty the Queen, the Prime Minister and the Archbishop of Canterbury. A relief fund has been opened for the benefits of the bereaved relatives and contributions from the public will be received at the office of the Mine Workers’ Union.”
